Fountain of Health Initiative for Optimal Aging

Fall 2016 National Report: A Year in Review

This Inaugural national report on the Fountain of Health provides an overview of the initiative and its activities in the past year for dissemination to our stakeholders, partners and community.

Background:

What is the Fountain of Health?

Founded in 2010, The Fountain of Health Initiative for Optimal Aging was developed at Dalhousie University Department of Psychiatry in the Nova Scotia Health Authority, and expanded to a national initiative in 2016. The Fountain of Health Initiative for Optimal Aging is one of the first seniors’ mental health promotion initiatives of its kind: The Fountain of Health (FoH) Initiative translates the science of healthy aging to support health behaviour change with evidence for improving wellbeing, resilience, brain health and longevity. The project also specifically provides clinicians with current research on healthy aging and with evidence-based tools to activate those behaviors in primary care and other clinical settings. The FoH is informed by cognitive behavioural theory and aligned with “Positive Psychiatry,” a new branch of psychiatry dedicated to science of wellbeing and resilience.

Why Is FoH Relevant?

With global population aging, there is an international call for health promotion to foster resilience, to prevent illness and to improve health outcomes in aging (Alzheimer Society, Mental Health Commission of Canada, World Health Organization). Agism and stigma of mental illness are social barriers that need to be redressed in order to optimize population health across the lifespan. For our health care system to better meet the needs of older adults, the dominant paradigm of “pathological aging” needs to shift to include the science of healthy aging as well as psychosocial and brain health within an appreciation of the social determinants of healthy aging. Efficient, evidence-based clinical tools to activate healthy aging attitudes and behaviors in office and practice settings are much--needed.

What is FoH’s Mission?

The FoH is a national non-profit organization that promotes health and wellness with age for all Canadians. The Fountain of Health has 3 main aims: 1) to shift negative attitudes about aging and mental illness and 2) to improve health behaviours and outcomes, by translating the science of resilience to clinicians and the public, and 3) to help catalyze a collective and meaningful investment in Canada’s aging population, particularly within the healthcare system, but also in the context of Age Friendly Communities and other supportive social networks that will better meet the mental health needs of older adults.

The Fountain of Health supports all Canadians to become more aware current science of healthy and active aging and promotes translation to action by:

- Raising public awareness about the science of healthy aging, and practical steps to promote resilience, emotional wellbeing and health over the lifespan. See Tools and Links.
- Offering clinical tools for health professionals to use with patients to promote changes in outlook and health behaviours. See Clinicians' Corner.
- Providing a Speakers’ Bureau of national experts on topics of resilience, emotional well being and healthy aging. See Speakers' Bureau.
- Contributing to national/ international research fostering collaborative research in positive psychiatry of aging, optimal, active aging and brain health. See Our People.
- Engaging national partner organizations to prioritize healthy aging/ seniors health promotion
- Providing international leadership in Positive Psychiatry through the World Psychiatric Association.

Fountain of Health Content: From Science to Practice

The FoH Initiative condenses current science of resilience and healthy aging into 5 key domains: 1) Positive Thinking 2) Social Activity 3) Physical Activity 4) Mental Health 5) Lifelong Learning. The FoH website, launched nationally in 2016, offers goal setting tools in the above 5 domains for the general public and for clinicians alike. FoH helps to shift attitude and health behaviours in 3 basic steps:

1) Use a self-assessment questionnaire, self-rate a baseline in the above five key areas
2) Learn about the new science of healthy aging, and rationale for behaviour changes
3) Set an achievable goal in one of these areas; share / track it to see if goal is attained

For the clinician, another step is to assess readiness for making change to help patients overcome psychological barriers. Visit the main page at www.fountainofhealth.ca to “Take the Quiz”, and the Optimal Aging section to set a health goal. A 3-minute summary of the project can be found on the main page under “Watch the Video. “ For a full list of Fountain of Health Tools, visit the Resources menu under “Tools and Links” for the public, and “Clinicians’ Corner” for healthcare providers.

Who is the Fountain of Health for?

The Fountain of Health is for practically everyone, but specifically targets the following:

General Public (primary prevention): Since outlook and lifestyle patterns in mid-life (50 plus) can determine how well people age, it is crucial that more members of the general public know this information and apply it, in mid-life if not earlier.

At-risk/ Ill Population (secondary prevention) - For those at increased health risk or stress, such as caregivers or those with preexisting mental or physical health problems, the Fountain of Health information offers tools to promote resilience in the face of stress or ill health, to potentially offset significant human and healthcare costs.
Healthcare Providers - Healthcare providers are offered practical evidence-based health promotion information and tools to help patients set and meet health goals, and deal with psychological barriers to change in a busy practice setting. Visit Clinicians’ Corner for additional tools to help clinicians address stigma of mental illness, assess late life mental illness, and offer non-pharmacological treatments (e.g., “Enhanced Group Cognitive Behavioural Therapy for Late Life Anxiety and Depression” manual).

FoH Funding and Two Provincial Pilot Projects

Financial funding for FoH to date has been through grants in the province of Nova Scotia, including: the Department of Health and Wellness, the Mental Health Foundation of Nova Scotia, the Department of Seniors and the Nova Scotia Health Authority.

In 2015-2016, the Fountain of Health applied for and received funding for two pilot projects:

Peer Leadership Project

The FoH Peer Leadership Project, funded by a $25,000.00 grant from New Horizons for Seniors Program, engaged Nova Scotians aged 50+ in the community to learn about FoH and set and meet health goals through peer mentorship. Peer leaders shared FoH information and dialogue in their community group over a 6 week period. Six modules covered topics of the FoH initiative, with a detailed facilitator guide for each session and PowerPoint slides with speakers notes. Senior peer leaders in the pilot also received a half-day orientation. The series of sessions were promoted and organized through community agencies, clubs, and libraries and offered free of charge.

The result of the pilot showed a high rate of learning and attitude shift from those who participated, and some goal setting. The package of tools are now available online and are accessible to anyone across Canada who wishes to run a FoH Series in their own community.

Primary Care Clinician Engagement Project

The Primary Care Clinician Engagement Project was a pilot project funded through a $10,000.00 Nova Scotia Department of Seniors Positive Aging Grant. FoH educational tools and resources were provided to primary care clinicians to use with patients 50 plus to guide them towards self-managed healthy aging. A clinician’s guide provided an introduction to the FoH initiative, a step-by-step process to use in guiding patients toward self-management, information about SMART goal setting, and tracking tools.

The result showed a moderate rate of learning and attitude shift toward aging in patients, and a high rate of goal setting. A simplified Clinicians’ Guide is now available online and accessible to clinicians across Canada who wishes to try out the tools in their own practices.
